Local Author Publishes Second in Series

Choices Made: Fathers and Sons
by Christine McMahon

Hilbert, WI (April, 2007) In her second novel, Choices Made: Father and Sons, Christine McMahon, has once again captivated her readers as they join Jamy (a.k.a. Lord Chance) in his journey to Juxton to meet his biological family.

The difficult task of taking on a series in her first writing efforts has paid off as her readers are asking for more. Christine says of this effort, “My empathy towards my character, Jamy, helps me plot his joys and successes as well as his anger when he regresses into his once troubled life. Delving into his personal dilemmas of reintegration into a family, Jamy must face his wants and fears with a strength born from his life on the streets.”

What Midwest Book Review said of Book 1, “Choices Made: The Street Years, is the debut novel of Christine McMahon and clearly establishes her as a gifted storyteller able to take her reader into a gritty world of drug addiction, poverty, and life on the street.”

Readers continuing the series have stated, “Having read the first of the Choices Made series, The Street Years, I was looking forward to the 2nd installment, and I was not disappointed.”

Published by Trafford Publishing, Choices Made: Fathers and Sons, is available on the book’s web site, www.ChoicesMade.com, Amazon.com and other on-line sources.
